

30 of the Brightest Shining Light Ministries

By Rodney L. Pitzer, Managing Director of Research

MinistryWatch.com desires to see overall giving to Biblical Christian values increase and as such we developed this format to highlight those ministries which are exemplary. The following 30 ministries are a sampling of the "best ministries" and outstanding examples when we consider Philippians 4:8 and weigh and take account of those ministries that are excellent and worthy of praise.

While identifying the best ministries is challenging given the selfless work that so many do for the cause of Christ, MinistryWatch.com believes that the following alphabetical list of 30 excellent ministries will be helpful to many. Each of the ministries mentioned has the following important features in common:

- Legitimate nonprofit ministry and purpose.
- Have shown a willingness to treat donors fairly via a Transparency Grade of "A".
- Are unashamed of being identified as an evangelical Christian ministry.
- MinistryWatch.com researchers knows of no significant issues that would be of concern to donors.

A high MinistryWatch.com Financial Efficiency Rating was not a requirement for inclusion on this list although most do have good ratings. Many factors were reviewed and strengths in other areas can offset weakness in financial efficiency when determining whether a ministry should be of interest to donors seeking to be good stewards of their giving. Only you can decide for yourself with confidence if a ministry shares your values and with your giving plan.

Prudent Steps for Donors

No one is possessed of unlimited resources, and we are not able to give to every ministry that we value. It is best to make an assessment of our options and make discerning decisions. Start by getting information before committing your financial resources. Consider the following in your assessment:

(1) Seek ministries that are transparent:

Is the ministry open and transparent, or are they experts in pushing emotional buttons in fundraising persuasion? Transparency is foundational in order to make a good decision. Does the ministry provide adequate financial reports for donors to be good stewards of their giving? Do not give to a ministry that claims it has no legal obligation to share financial or other information — it has a moral obligation to do so. Without access to comprehensive ministry information it is not possible for donors to make optimal giving decisions. Ministries that seek to obscure critical information from scrutiny undermine the faith and trust of donors and damage attitudes that have a long term negative impact. For those few ministries that state it has no legal obligation, it should be noted that donors are even less so obligated with any legalist obligation to give, but they do have a moral obligation to give in a prudent and wise fashion. Transparency is a consensus of practical sound wisdom. Many Christians are willing to live ethically without a governmental entity mandating that they do so. Transparency is the key component to a growing and prosperous donor — ministry relationship and fundamental to long-term ministry success.

(2) Examine the truth claims:

Now that the organization is open and giving you information, is it in fact telling the truth? If the ministry states that your gifts are tax deductible, is it true? Is the organization in fact what it says it is and is it doing what it claims? There are fraudulent and fake organizations and scams, in particular after major disasters they seem to come on the scene in droves. And those ministries that are legally formed and have a sound purpose, are they in fact spending donations as solicited? Truth is synchronized with fact and reality, not just a gut feeling and mere belief. Do not rely on an emotional hope of what the ministry might be doing, but instead check out the facts. Saint Thomas Aquinas said, "Doubt leads to inquiry and inquiry leads to the truth." We will discover the truth as a result of our ability to inquire and to learn from that inquiry.

(3) Are your beliefs as a donor reflected in the ministry?

Ministries represent values, but do they represent your values? How is the organization "Christian?" Is it Christian in name only? Do they just market to Christians? Do they evangelize? What is their message? Do they teach? What do they teach? How do their theological underpinnings determine their actions? Have they strayed from theological beginnings? Are their motivations based on a theological premise? Do they have a statement of faith or a creed? What do they say or not say about God? Is it important that the organization is pro-life? Is it important how they define family? Are denominational connections important?

(4) What type of ministry function do you want to support?

What kind of ministry do you believe the Lord is guiding you to give to? What type of ministry do you want to give to? Some options include Relief and Development, Foreign Missions, Evangelism Support, Evangelism, Educational Media, Community Development, Christian Growth, and Advocacy.

(5) How resourceful are your dollars being used by the ministry?

What information is available in what the organization has done and how efficient is the ministry in using its resources? Is the ministry in need of additional gifts, or have they built themselves a great nest egg that looks like a perpetual foundation that could live on investments? Is the organization just all talk or are they actually accomplishing something and/or providing a great service to society? Additionally, consider the structure of the organization. Generally the simpler the structure, the more donor efficient an organization is going to be. If an organization is primarily a "fundraising" tool that in turn gives to other organizations, more overhead expenses are being used before a smaller portion of your donation makes it to those in need. Check out MinistryWatch.com's 5 Star Financial Efficiency Ratings to measure a ministry's financial efficiency. This is an objective measure because they are derived from financial ratios that are based on financial information contained within a ministry's audited financial statement or its IRS Form 990. The overall rating is a summarization of the financial efficiency rating system's three efficiency area assessments. The three efficiency areas are Fund Acquisition, Resource Allocation and Asset Utilization.

(6) Are there any red flag issues that make you uncomfortable?

Are there any odd aspects of the ministry? Is the organization embroiled in lawsuits and if so, why? Does the organization employ highly emotional fundraising appeals? Emotional appeals that question or measure the depth of your faith based on how you give to them should be ignored. Is the organization's structure understandable or confusing? Do the claims made by the ministry seem realistic? Does the ministry seem to manipulate scripture and/or rely on extra biblical revelations, if so look elsewhere.

(7) Seek consultation:

It is not wise to ignore talking with your spouse before committing financial resources. And if you do not have a spouse, talk to other family members. Bounce things around with a mentor, church members, and other godly counselors. If you do not have the time to perform some due diligence research, check out a donor advocacy website like MinistryWatch.com.
